1.0 One clear picture — Europeans to English ascendancy

Phase	Rough years	Nature	Key fact
Portuguese monopoly	1498–c.1600	Crown forts + cartaze	Gama 1498; Goa 1510 (गोवा)
Multi-company trade	1600–1740	Factories under Mughal / local leave	EIC 1600 (ईआईसी); VOC 1602 (वीओसी); French 1664
Anglo-French duel	1740–1763	Carnatic Wars	Aix 1748; Wandiwash 1760; Paris 1763
English ascendancy	after 1763	Rivals reduced to enclaves	Bengal path opens next

Why the English beat the French in India (short):

- Stronger navy and regular Company support from home.
- Better local alliances in the Carnatic after Arcot.
- Dupleix was recalled; French politics undercut continuity.
- After Paris 1763 France kept factories, not an empire.

Logic: Advent of Europeans ≠ British Raj. Factories came first; territorial empire came after Plassey.

1.0a Political backdrop — why companies could intervene

Brief opening only | full Nawabi / Mysore / Maratha (मराठा) / Sikh cards belong with Company expansion

- After Aurangzeb died in 1707, the Mughal imperial centre lost firm control over distant provinces.
- Successor states rose under loose Mughal shadow (छाया): Bengal, Awadh (अवध), Hyderabad, the Carnatic (कर्नाटक) Nawabs, Mysore, the Marathas, and later the Sikhs.
- Provincial Nawabs and Deccan powers fought their own succession wars. European companies sold arms, trained troops, and backed rival claimants.
- Coastal trade stayed rich even when the inland empire was weak. Factories needed only local leave or a farman, not a strong emperor at Delhi.
- This opening condition explains why Anglo–French proxy politics worked in the Carnatic and why Company power later grew in Bengal. It does not mean Europeans already ruled India in 1600.

1.1 Arrival of European Companies

- Europeans first came for spices, especially pepper, cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg.
- They later sought cotton, silk, indigo (नील), opium and saltpetre as well. High-grade opium and saltpetre from Bihar fed European demand.
- Early presence was coastal and commercial. It was not pan-India political rule.
- After the Ottoman rise, overland and Red Sea routes became costlier because of middlemen.
- Bartolomeu Dias rounded the Cape of Good Hope in 1488.
- Vasco da Gama reached India in 1498.
- Mercantilist states wanted bullion and a direct sea route. They gave royal monopoly to chartered companies.
- Better ships, the compass and new maps made the long voyage possible.
- With the Portuguese, trade and Catholic mission often travelled together.

Power	Vehicle	Key year	First / main early base
Portuguese	Estado da Índia (crown)	1498 (Gama)	Goa from 1510
Dutch	VOC	1602 (company); India from c.1605	Pulicat / Masulipatnam / Surat
English	EIC	31 Dec 1600 (charter); India from 1608	Surat 1613
Danish	Danish EIC	1616	Tranquebar 1620
French	French EIC	1664	Surat 1668; Pondicherry 1674

Arrival order in India (must-score):

Order	Power	First contact / company tag
1	Portuguese	1498 (Gama)
2	Dutch	VOC 1602; India from c.1605
3	English	Charter 1600; India from 1608
4	Danes	Company 1616; Tranquebar 1620
5	French	Company 1664; Surat 1668
Stage	Period	Nature
---	---	---
Portuguese monopoly	1498–c.1600	Crown forts + cartaze
Multi-company trade	1600–1740	Factories under Mughal / local permission
Anglo-French wars	1740–1763	Carnatic Wars
English ascendancy	After 1763	Rivals reduced to enclaves

- A chartered company had a royal monopoly. It could trade, fortify, make treaties and raise troops.
- Portuguese India was a crown empire. The Dutch, English, French and Danish were mainly company-led.
- Early English and Dutch trade at ports such as Surat rested on a Mughal farman, not on conquest.
- Arrival of Europeans is not the same as the British Raj. Factories came first; territorial empire came much later.
- Portuguese were the first to arrive (1498) and the last to leave (1961), when India liberated Goa. The last Portuguese Governor-General (गवर्नर-जनरल) of Goa was Manuel António Vassalo e Silva (1958–61). At India's Independence in 1947, the Goa Governor-General was José Ferreira Bossa.

Voyager	Linked to	What papers test
Vasco da Gama	Portugal	Sea route to India, 1498
Christopher Columbus	Spain (Italian-born; Spanish finance)	Americas
Captain Cook	Britain	Australia route / Pacific exploration
Abel Tasman	Holland	Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) and New Zealand

> Logic: Never swap EIC 1600 and VOC 1602. Arrival order is not the same as charter-year order — Dutch ships reached India before permanent English factories.

1.2 Portuguese in India

First European sea power in India | crown Estado da Índia | forts, not a Gangetic land empire

Portuguese timeline in India

Year	Event
20 May 1498	Vasco da Gama at Calicut; welcomed by Zamorin
Sept 1500	Cabral; early factory path at Calicut
1503	First European fort at Cochin (Albuquerque, not yet Governor)
1505	Almeida first Viceroy; Blue Water Policy; forts at Cannanore / Anjediva
1509	Naval victory at Diu; Albuquerque becomes Governor
1510	Goa taken from Yusuf Adil Shah; Estado capital
1511	Malacca
1515	Hormuz
1534	Leave for Satgaon and Chatgaon from Ghiyasuddin Mahmud Shah
1534–35	Bassein and Diu under Nuno da Cunha
1632	Shah Jahan destroys Portuguese Hooghly base
1961	Goa liberated; Portuguese leave India

- A cartaze was a Portuguese sea-pass. Indian Ocean ships had to buy it. Refusal meant seizure of the ship.
- Portuguese Asia was also divided into capitanias (captaincies). Each coastal fort and its trade belt sat under a captain answerable to the Estado at Goa.
- Capitanias organised forts and customs. The cartaze taxed ships on the high seas. Papers often swap the two names — keep them apart.
- Hormuz and Malacca were choke-points. The aim was control of sea lanes, not conquest of the Deccan interior.
- At Hooghly the Portuguese traded textiles, saltpetre and slaves, and used the port (बंदरगाह) as a piracy base in the Bay of Bengal until 1632.
- They never ruled Delhi or Agra. Late holdings were Goa, Daman and Diu. Portuguese were first to arrive and last to leave (1961).
- St Francis Xavier and Goan churches are a cultural fact. Papers still test Goa = Portuguese.
- Portuguese travellers often tested: Barbosa, Paes, Nuniz. Peter Mundy was British under Shah Jahan, not Portuguese.

Bengal settlements by power

Settlement	Power	Note
Hooghly / Bandel	Portuguese	Piracy base till 1632
Chinsurah	Dutch	Fort Gustavus from 1653
Chandernagore	French	Not Chinsurah
Serampore	Danish	Also called Frederiksnagore
Calcutta	English	Job Charnock / Sutanuti from 1690

Why Portuguese power declined

- Dutch and English navies broke the cartaze monopoly in the 17th century.
- Manpower was small, so they could not garrison a vast Asian network.
- Forts from East Africa to Malacca stretched them thin.
- Union with Spain (1580–1640) dragged Portugal into Spain's wars, including against the Dutch.

> Logic: Rise = Goa 1510. Bengal fall = Hooghly 1632. Gama did not take Goa. First fort = Cochin 1503, not Goa.

1.3 Portuguese Governors

These were crown officers at Goa, not directors of a joint-stock company.

Governors / Viceroys timeline (early Estado da Índia)

Order	Person	Years	Office	Must-score tag
1	Francisco de Almeida	1505–09	First Viceroy	Blue Water Policy; Battle of Diu 1509
2	Afonso de Albuquerque	1509–15	Governor	Real founder; Goa 1510; Malacca 1511; Hormuz 1515
3	Lopo Soares de Albergaria	1515–18	Governor	Succeeded Albuquerque
4	Diogo Lopes de Sequeira	1518–22	Governor	—
5	Duarte de Menezes	1522–24	Governor	—
6	Vasco da Gama	1524	Viceroy (second term in India)	Died at Cochin 1524

Order	Person	Years	Office	Must-score tag
7	Henrique de Menezes	1524–26	Governor	—
—	Pedro Mascarenhas	1526	Brief / disputed succession	Not the main PSC name
8	Lopo Vaz de Sampaio	1526–29	Governor	Immediate predecessor of Nuno
9	Nuno da Cunha	1529–38	Governor	HQ Cochin → Goa; Bassein 1534; Diu 1535

Not a governor: Pedro Álvares Cabral reached India in September 1500 and opened the early Calicut factory path. He belongs to the arrival card, not this timeline.

Teaching cards for the three PSC names

- Francisco de Almeida was the first Portuguese Viceroy (1505–09).
- His Blue Water Policy meant control of sea lanes, not conquest of the Deccan interior. The Portuguese were to be the sole trade power in the Arabian Sea and the Indian Ocean.
- He won the naval battle of Diu in 1509 against an Egyptian–Gujarat fleet.
- Afonso de Albuquerque was Governor 1509–15.
- He captured Goa in 1510 from Yusuf Adil Shah and made it the capital of Estado da Índia.
- He also strengthened Malacca (1511) and Hormuz (1515).
- He is called the real founder of Portuguese power in India.

Albuquerque's main policies

- He built a string (सूत्र) of fortified choke-points so Portuguese ships could control spice and Red Sea–Persian (फ़ारसी) Gulf traffic.
- He kept a strong navy as the backbone of Estado power.
- He encouraged Portuguese men to settle as casados and marry local women, so forts had a settled garrison population (जनसंख्या).
- In Portuguese-held areas he moved against practices such as sati and pressed Catholic mission alongside trade.
- He treated Arab and Ottoman sea rivals as enemies of the cartaze system. His method was fort + fleet + settled colony, not a Gangetic land empire.

Nuno da Cunha

- Nuno da Cunha governed 1529–38, after Lopo Vaz de Sampaio.
- He secured Bassein (1534) and Diu (1535) from the Gujarat coast.
- He also shifted the Portuguese headquarters from Cochin to Goa.
- He pressed Portuguese power along the western seaboard after Albuquerque's generation.

> Logic: First Viceroy = Almeida (1505), not Albuquerque. Albuquerque is the consolidator who took Goa. Cabral is 1500 voyage, not in the governor line.

1.4 Vasco da Gama

Portuguese navigator under King Manuel I.

- A Gujarati guide, Ahmad ibn Majid, helped him find the Indian Ocean crossing.
- He rounded the Cape of Good Hope.
- He reached Calicut (Kozhikode) on 20 May 1498.
- He met the Zamorin (Samoothiri) of Calicut, who welcomed him.
- He opened a viable all-sea Atlantic route for Portugal.
- Pepper trade from that voyage made huge profits in Europe (often cited as about sixty times). That lure brought more Portuguese fleets.
- He did not "discover India". Afro-Asian trade already existed.
- On the first visit he stayed only a few months, not a full year. He revisited India in 1502 (not 1501), using force more openly.
- He died at Cochin in 1524, after a later viceroy assignment.
- He did not capture Goa.

> Logic: One-line fact — Gama + Calicut + 20 May 1498 + Zamorin + Ahmad ibn Majid.

1.5 Dutch in India

VOC (Vereenigde Oostindische Compagnie) | chartered 1602 | United Provinces | eastern HQ Batavia (Jakarta)

Who they were

- Several Dutch trading groups were united in 1602 into the VOC by a States-General charter.
- The charter gave monopoly rights east of the Cape, plus power to wage war, build forts, coin (मुद्रा) money and make treaties.
- Capital is often cited as about 6.5 million guilders. Partners ran it as a private chartered company under state leave.
- Cornelis de Houtman had already reached Sumatra and Bantam in 1596, before the VOC charter.
- The Dutch came second among Europeans in India after the Portuguese. Their first Indian factory is usually placed at Masulipatnam in 1605.

What they traded

Unlike Portuguese spice monopoly politics, Dutch India trade fed the Spice Islands network with Indian goods.

Commodity	Source belt
Cotton textiles	Coromandel, Gujarat, Bengal
Silk	Bengal and Gujarat
Indigo	Yamuna (यमुना) valley and central India
Saltpetre	Bihar
Opium and rice	Ganga (गंगा) valley / Bihar–Bengal
Pepper and spices	Malabar and the Indonesian islands (main profit home)

- Indian cotton textiles were the Dutch exchange medium for spices in Southeast Asia.
- Bengal later became their richest South Asian trade zone for silk, saltpetre and opium.
- The VOC's main money still came from the Indonesian Spice Islands, not from building a Gangetic land empire.

Dutch timeline in India

1602	VOC founded; eastern HQ later at Batavia

Pulicat	Coromandel	HQ till 1690; Fort Geldria
Nagapattinam	Coromandel	Taken 1658; HQ from 1690
Surat	West coast	1616; linked Agra, Broach (भरूच), Ahmedabad (अहमदाबाद)
Bimlipatam	Andhra coast	1641
Karaikal	Tamil coast	1645 (Dutch phase)
Sadras	Coromandel	Dutch pocket
Pipali / Balasore	Orissa–Bengal approach	Early Bengal phase
Chinsurah	Bengal (Hooghly)	1653; Fort Gustavus; silk and saltpetre
Kasimbazar, Baranagar, Dhaka	Bengal	Textile / silk network
Patna	Bihar	Saltpetre
Cochin (Kochi)	Malabar	Dutch 1663–1814/24; Fort Williams

- Pulicat was built with leave from a Vijayanagara (विजयनगर) remnant ruler at Vellore. The Dutch minted gold pagodas there.
- From the 1650s Bengal factories were organised as a separate directorate, with Chinsurah as the chief seat.
- On the Malabar coast the Dutch broke Portuguese hold between 1658 and 1663, culminating in the capture of Cochin.

Against the Portuguese

- The Dutch broke Portuguese sea monopoly in the Spice Islands, Malacca, and coastal Ceylon.
- Ceylon forts fell in stages: Galle (1640), Colombo (1656), Jaffna (1658).
- Nagapattinam and Malabar forts followed the same anti-Portuguese push.
- By the later 17th century Portuguese India was reduced mainly to Goa, Daman and Diu, while Dutch power sat on Coromandel, Malabar and Ceylon coasts.

Battle of Colachel, 10 August 1741

Travancore vs VOC | place Colachel (present Kanyakumari (कन्याकुमारी) belt) | king Marthanda Varma

Causes

- Dutch Malabar trade feared Travancore's rise under Marthanda Varma (from 1729).
- The VOC backed local rivals and tried to keep pepper routes and coastal posts under Dutch influence.
- Reinforcements came from Dutch Ceylon. The landing aimed to humble Travancore before it closed the southern pepper coast.

Course

- Dutch forces under Eustachius De Lannoy landed near Colachel.
- Marthanda Varma's army (सेना), with Ramayyan Dalawa, met them on 10 August 1741.
- Travancore won in the field. De Lannoy and other European officers were captured.

Results

- Dutch political hopes on the Travancore–Malabar edge collapsed.
- De Lannoy later entered Travancore service, trained the army on European lines, and rose as senior commander (Valiya Kappithan).
- He helped build works such as the Nedumkotta line. He is buried at Udayagiri (उदयगिरि) Fort.
- Colachel is remembered as a rare clear victory of an Indian kingdom's own army over a European company force.

Battle of Bedara (Chinsurah / Biderra / Hooghly), 25 November 1759

English EIC vs VOC | Bengal after Plassey (प्लासी) | English commander Colonel Francis Forde

Causes

- After Plassey (1757) English power in Bengal rose fast.
- Mir Jafar (मीर जाफ़र), the puppet Nawab, grew restless under English pressure and secretly invited Dutch help from Chinsurah.
- The VOC sent ships and troops from Batavia up the Hooghly to restore Dutch weight in Bengal.
- Britain and the Dutch Republic were not formally at war in Europe, but Company forces still fought in Bengal.
- Clive and the Calcutta council treated the Dutch fleet as a direct threat to English supremacy after Plassey.

Course

- English ships beat the Dutch squadron on the Hooghly around 24 November 1759.
- On 25 November 1759, Forde met the Dutch land force on the plain of Biderra / Bedara near Chinsurah.
- Dutch columns were disordered at a ditch, then broken by English artillery and infantry.
- Heavy Dutch casualties and surrenders followed. Chinsurah's military challenge ended.

Results

- Dutch political and military ambition in India effectively ended.
- The Dutch kept only commercial footholds under English shadow.
- English supremacy in Bengal after Plassey was confirmed against the last serious European rival there.
- Path to later Company expansion no longer faced a Dutch army in Bengal.

Why the Dutch declined in India

- They preferred trade over territorial empire in India. Real profit home was the Indonesian Spice Islands.
- After mid-17th century Anglo–Dutch wars, a rough sphere split emerged: English weight in India, Dutch weight in Indonesia. Coaching notes often tag a 1667 Anglo–Dutch settlement in that sense, but Dutch factories in India still continued for decades.
- Amboyna (1623) and later Anglo–Dutch wars kept rivalry alive at sea and in Asia.
- English naval strength, Bengal resources after Plassey, and Company militarisation outpaced the VOC's India posture.
- Colachel (1741) ended Dutch Malabar push. Bedara (1759) ended Dutch Bengal politics.
- During the Napoleonic age Britain occupied Dutch posts. By the Anglo-Dutch Treaty of 1824, the Dutch ceded remaining Indian factories (including Chinsurah and Negapatam) in return for British concessions in the Malay–Sumatra sphere.

Anglo–Dutch rivalry in India (short card)

- Early English and Dutch companies were spice rivals. Bitterness peaked after the Amboyna Massacre (1623) in Indonesia, when Dutch authorities killed English factors.
- Seventeenth-century Anglo–Dutch wars in Europe spilled into Asian trade. By the later 1600s a rough split took shape: English weight in India, Dutch weight in the Spice Islands — often tagged around 1667, though Dutch factories in India continued.
- On the ground in India the decisive blows were Colachel (1741) against Travancore and Bedara / Chinsurah (1759) against the English.
- The Anglo–Dutch Treaty of 1824 closed the story: Dutch Indian posts went to Britain; Britain adjusted claims in the Malay–Sumatra sphere.
- Do not confuse Anglo–Dutch rivalry with the Carnatic Wars, which were English vs French.

> Logic: First Dutch factory = Masulipatnam 1605. Coromandel HQ = Pulicat then Nagapattinam. Bengal fort = Gustavus at Chinsurah. Colachel = Travancore vs Dutch. Bedara = English vs Dutch. Kochi Fort Williams ≠ Calcutta Fort William.

Chronology home for UPPCS 2022 battle-order stem

This stem mixes four (चातुर्याम) theatres. Years live here so the order can be solved without hunting three chapters:

Battle	Year	Theatre / who fought
Shakarkheda	1724	Nizam-ul-Mulk (निजाम-उल-मुल्क) defeats Mubariz Khan; Asaf Jahi Deccan hold
Bedara (Chinsurah)	1759	English (Forde) defeat Dutch in Bengal
Porto Novo	1781	English (Eyre Coote) defeat Hyder Ali (हैदर अली) — 2nd Anglo-Mysore (आंग्ल-मैसूर) War
Mudki	1845	English vs Sikhs — opening battle of 1st Anglo-Sikh (आंग्ल-सिख) War

Order: Shakarkheda → Bedara → Porto Novo → Mudki.

PYQ — UPPCS Prelims 2022, Q64

Consider the following events and arrange them in chronological order.

I. Battle of Mudki II. Battle of Porto Novo III. Battle of Shakarkheda IV. Battle of Bedara

Options: A. II, III, IV, I B. III, IV, II, I C. IV, III, II, I D. I, II, III, IV

Show answer

Logic: Match each name to the year table above. Do not sort by “famousness”. Mudki is Sikh (1845), not Mysore. Ans: B — III, IV, II, I = 1724 → 1759 → 1781 → 1845.

1.6 English East India Company

Queen Elizabeth I charter | 31 December 1600 | London merchants’ East Indies monopoly | Emperor in India then: Akbar (अकबर)

- Before the EIC sea charter, the Levant Company received a 1592 charter for land-route trade with India. Do not call Levant the first sea East India Company.
- Company power stayed commercial through most of the 17th century. Political empire came later, after the Carnatic Wars and the Bengal conquests.

Company charter ladder (factory / monopoly years)

These are Company charter renewals, not modern industrial Factory Acts.

1708	Godolphin's Award — Old and New companies unite as the United Company of Merchants of England Trading to the East Indies

- After 1708 there is one English East India Company for India trade and politics.
- Charter years explain Company legal power. They do not by themselves mean territorial empire.

Battle of Swally (Suvali), 1612

English vs Portuguese | near Surat | English captain Thomas Best

Causes

- The Portuguese still claimed a sea monopoly on the western coast and tried to keep English ships out of Surat's trade.
- The English East India Company needed a permanent west-coast factory. Temporary Masulipatnam (1611) was not enough for Gujarat trade.
- A Portuguese squadron challenged Best's ships at the Swally (Suvali) anchorage outside Surat.

Course

- In 1612 Best fought the Portuguese at sea near Swally.
- English gunnery and seamanship won the action.
- Mughal officers at Surat watched the fight. Portuguese prestige on that coast fell.

Results

- Jahangir's officers allowed a permanent English factory at Surat in 1613.
- Swally is the naval hinge between temporary Masulipatnam (1611) and permanent Surat (1613).
- Do not date the permanent Surat factory as 1612 — that year is the battle, not the factory grant.

Farrukhsiyar's farman, 1717

- In 1717 Emperor Farrukhsiyar granted the English Company a major farman after the Surman embassy.
- The Company gained wide duty-free trade privileges in Bengal for a fixed annual payment, plus rights linked to dastaks (duty-pass documents).
- This farman made English Bengal trade far more privileged than ordinary merchants.
- Later Nawabs fought private misuse of dastaks by Company servants. That quarrel feeds the Plassey story, but the 1717 farman is not the Diwani.
- Diwani of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa came only in 1765, after Buxar (बक्सर).
- Trichinopoly and Chicacole were not English factory centres in the first quarter of the 17th century.
- Success factors often listed together: weak Indian nationalism in the modern sense, Western-trained Company armies with modern arms, and Indian soldiers who could be hired by whoever paid.

> Logic: Hawkins arrived 1608, not 1611. Roe is James I's ambassador; Hawkins is an EIC captain. Permanent Surat = 1613. Farman 1717 ≠ Diwani 1765.

PYQ — UPPCS Prelims 2023, Q31

With reference to Captain Hawkins, which of the following statement(s) is/are correct?

1. He came to India in 1611 as an envoy of James I.
2. He was very well versed in the Turkish language.

A. Only 1

B. Only 2

C. Both 1 and 2

D. Neither 1 nor 2

Show answer

Logic: Turkish skill is correct. Arrival is 1608, not 1611; he was not James I's ambassador (that is Roe) Ans: B — Turkish skill is correct. Arrival is 1608, not 1611; he was not James I's ambassador (that is Roe).

- François Martin turned Pondicherry into the French headquarters from 1674.

Dupleix method (why he matters)

- He planted European-trained forces in Indian courts at Indian expense.
- He backed claimants in Hyderabad and Carnatic succession for French gain.
- Clive later copied that proxy method for the English.
- Paris directors hated the cost and recalled him in 1754.

Why the French failed against the English

- Weaker navy and weaker continuous home support.
- Dupleix's recall broke French political continuity.
- After Plassey 1757 (प्लासी) the English had Bengal's resources; France had no equal Indian revenue base.
- Lally quarrelled with officers and Indian allies; Wandiwash 1760 ended field power.

> Logic: Governor order = Martin → Lenoir → Dumas → Dupleix → Lally. First factory = Surat 1668. HQ = Pondicherry. Wars = three Carnatic / Anglo-French wars, not Anglo-Mysore.

1.10 Factories and Presidencies

- A factory was a trading post. It had a warehouse, factors (agents) and guards.
- It was not a modern industrial mill.
- Early factories needed local permission or a Mughal farman.
- The usual path was factory, then fortified town, then Presidency headquarters, then territorial administration.

1.11 British–French Rivalry / Anglo-French Conflict

- The main theatre was the Coromandel Coast between 1746 and 1763.
- Madras was the English base. Pondicherry was the French base. They sat close together and wanted the same textile trade.
- The three Carnatic Wars are the same fights as the Anglo-French Wars in India.
- Second Anglo-French War = Second Carnatic War (c.1749–54).

Rivalry timeline

Year	Event
1740	War of Austrian Succession opens in Europe
1746–48	First Carnatic War — French take Madras; Aix-la-Chapelle returns it
1749–54	Second Carnatic War — Ambur, Arcot; Dupleix recalled
1756–63	Seven Years' War in Europe
1757	Plassey gives English Bengal resources
1758–63	Third Carnatic War — failed Madras siege; Wandiwash; Paris 1763

- The French entered Indian politics late. Their trade was weaker than English trade.
- Dupleix tried to close that gap by backing Indian claimants in succession disputes.
- His method was to put a client on the throne and take territory or revenue in return.
- The English answered by backing the rival claimant. Muhammad Ali in the Carnatic is the example.
- They also used sea power and struck political centres such as Arcot in 1751.

- A weakening Mughal centre left Nawab and Nizam (निजाम) successions open to intervention.
- The English had a stronger navy and more company money. Long wars favoured the side that could send ships and troops from home.
- Dupleix was recalled in 1754.
- Count de Lally later alienated Indian allies.
- After Plassey 1757 the English also had Bengal's resources. France had no equal Indian revenue base.
- After 1763 France kept factories and enclaves. It did not keep an Indian empire.

> Logic: Peak rivalry is the 18th century, not 1498. The three war cards follow this section.

1.12 Carnatic Wars

Three Anglo-French wars | South India 1746–1763 | Indian allies on both sides

- The theatre was the Carnatic, the coastal plain around Arcot on the Coromandel.
- Hyderabad succession pulled both companies into the Deccan as well.
- The wars decided which company would dominate Coromandel politics. They were not a fight for "Carnatic independence."

1.13 First Carnatic War, 1746–1748

War of Austrian Succession | Nawab Anwaruddin Khan | ends with Aix-la-Chapelle 1748

Causes

- Madras (English) and Pondicherry (French) sat on the same Coromandel coast. They competed for the same piece-goods trade, so the two companies were already rivals on the ground.
- Britain and France went to war in Europe over the Austrian succession from 1740. That European quarrel spilled into India.
- Immediate spark: English forces under Captain Bernett seized French ships. Anglo-French fighting then began on the Coromandel even before home governments had fully scripted an Indian war.

Course

- In 1746 a French fleet under La Bourdonnais joined Dupleix and captured Madras.
- Dupleix wanted to keep Madras as a French prize. La Bourdonnais wanted to ransom it back to the English. The two men quarrelled, and La Bourdonnais left the coast.
- Nawab Anwaruddin Khan ordered the French to restore Madras. They refused.
- He sent about 10,000 men under Mahfooz Khan. At the Battle of Adyar, also called St Thome (1746), a smaller French force under Captain Paradise defeated that Nawabi army on the Adyar river near Madras.
- The battle showed that drilled European-style troops could beat a traditional Indian army in the open. Both sides took note. Dupleix's method of using trained infantry and Indian clients guided later English campaigns.

Results

- The Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle (1748) ended the War of Austrian Succession in Europe. That ended this war in India as well.
- Madras was returned to the English. The French kept Pondicherry.
- No lasting territory changed hands. Both companies had, however, learned to use Indian allies and trained infantry, and they used that lesson in the next round.

> Logic: Aix-la-Chapelle did not give Madras to France. Immediate cause = seizure of French ships, not “Carnatic succession” (that is the Second War).

1.14 Second Carnatic War, c.1749–1754

Also called Second Anglo-French War | Indian succession, not a European peace treaty

Causes

- This war did not wait for a new European peace crisis. It grew from succession fights in Hyderabad and the Carnatic.
- After Nizam Asaf Jah I died, Muzaffar Jung and Nasir Jung claimed Hyderabad. That dispute pulled both companies into the Deccan.
- In the Carnatic, Chanda Sahib claimed the Nawabship with French backing, while Muhammad Ali, son of Anwaruddin, held English backing. Each company now had its own local client to defend.

Course

- At Ambur in 1749 (not 1752), Chanda Sahib with Muzaffar Jung and the French defeated and killed Anwaruddin. Chanda Sahib then occupied Arcot.
- Muhammad Ali took shelter at Trichinopoly. The English had to keep him alive if they wanted a Carnatic client.
- In 1751 Robert Clive seized and held Arcot, Chanda Sahib's capital, with a small force. The defence pulled French and Chanda Sahib troops away from Trichinopoly, and Clive's stand raised English prestige among Indian rulers.

- Fighting around Trichinopoly dragged on for months.
- In the Deccan, Bussy kept French influence at Hyderabad for a time, especially under Salabat Jung.
- French directors in Paris disliked the mounting cost of Dupleix's wars.

Results

- They recalled Dupleix in 1754. Godeheu replaced him and sought peace with the English (Treaty of Pondicherry, 1754).
- Muhammad Ali remained the English-supported Nawab of the Carnatic.
- The French political project in the south had peaked and then fallen.
- This war comes before the First Anglo-Mysore War of 1767–69.

> Logic: Arcot 1751 belongs to the Second War, not the Third. Paris 1763 does not end this war.

1.15 Third Carnatic War, 1758–1763

Seven Years' War | French commander Count de Lally | ends with Paris 1763

Causes

- The Seven Years' War (1756–63) between Britain and France in Europe reopened Anglo-French fighting in India.

- Count de Lally arrived as French commander. He was a soldier of the Crown, not a company diplomat like Dupleix, and he pushed for an aggressive campaign.
- By this point the English already had Bengal's resources after Plassey (1757), which gave them a financial edge the French could not match.

Course

- The French besieged Madras in 1758–59 and failed to take it. That failure cost time, money and allies.
- Lally quarrelled with his officers and with Indian allies.
- Bussy was pulled away from Hyderabad, which weakened the French Deccan position.
- On 22 January 1760, Eyre Coote defeated Lally at Wandiwash (Vandavasi).
- After Wandiwash the English took the remaining French posts one by one. Pondicherry fell in 1761 after a siege.

Results

- The Treaty of Paris (1763) ended the Seven Years' War globally and closed this Indian war.
- France kept trading factories such as Pondicherry. It could not rebuild an Indian political empire.
- English political supremacy over the French in India was confirmed. Attention could now shift to Bengal consolidation and later Mysore and Maratha wars.

> Logic: Third War trio = failed Madras siege, Wandiwash 1760, Paris 1763. Not 1748.

1.16 Battle of Wandiwash, 1760

22 January 1760 | Wandiwash (Vandavasi), Tamil Nadu (नाडु) | Third Carnatic War

Causes

- The Third Carnatic War had reached a decisive stage. The French under Count de Lally had already failed to take Madras in 1758–59.
- French strength was further weakened when Bussy was pulled away from Hyderabad, and by Lally's quarrels with his own officers and Indian allies.
- Both companies needed one clear pitched-battle result to settle who controlled the Carnatic.

Course

- On 22 January 1760, English forces under Eyre Coote met French forces under Count de Lally at Wandiwash (Vandavasi).
- It was a conventional pitched battle of infantry, cavalry and artillery, fought in the open rather than as a siege.
- Coote defeated Lally and broke French field power in the south.

Results

- Remaining French posts fell one by one after the battle. Pondicherry was taken in 1761 after a siege.
- The defeat opened the path to the Treaty of Paris (1763), which closed French political hopes in India.
- This was an Anglo-French battle fought in South India. It was not Anglo-Mysore, not Anglo-Maratha (आंग्ल-मराठा), and not fought in Bengal.

> Logic: Commander pair = Coote vs Lally. Clive belongs to Arcot and Plassey, not Wandiwash.

1.17 Treaty of Paris, 1763

Ended the Seven Years' War globally and closed the Third Carnatic War in India.

- It confirmed English political supremacy over France in India.
- France retained trading factories. Pondicherry remained a commercial foothold.
- France did not regain an Indian empire.
- After 1763 English attention shifted to Bengal consolidation, then later to Mysore and Maratha wars.

Treaty	Year	Ends	India
Aix-la-Chapelle	1748	First Carnatic War	Madras returned to English
Paris	1763	Third Carnatic / Seven Years' War	French political defeat; factories remain

> Logic: Paris did not return Madras after 1746 — that was Aix-la-Chapelle. Paris did not expel every Frenchman forever.
