3.0 Phase framework — the one picture to hold first

Do not memorise 30-odd names as a flat list. The office itself changed shape four times. Fix the shape, then hang each ruler on the right hook.

Phase	Years	What changed	First holder
Company Governors of Bengal	to 1773	Governor of Fort William / Bengal Presidency (प्रेसीडेंसी) under Company charter; no all-India legal standing	Clive (1758–60, 1765–67)
Governor-General of Bengal	1773–1833	Regulating Act creates the post with a 4-member Council; Bombay and Madras stayed formally separate but subordinate on war, peace and treaties	Warren Hastings
Governor-General of India	1833–1858	Charter Act of 1833 extends the office over all British India; Company keeps administering but stops trading altogether	William Bentinck
Viceroy	1858–1947	GOI Act 1858 ends Company rule after the 1857 Revolt; the Crown rules directly; the same person now holds both titles, Viceroy (Crown's representative) and Governor-General (head of administration)	Canning
Late Viceroys / transfer of power	1936–1947	Provincial autonomy, war-time politics, and constitutional missions run down to Partition and Independence	Linlithgow → Wavell → Mountbatten

British policy towards Indian states (PSC ladder)

#	Years	Policy name
1	1740–65	Company's struggle for equality with Indian powers
2	1765–1813	Ring Fence / Security Cell (buffer logic; Hastings and Wellesley)
3	1813–57	Subordinate Isolation
4	1858–1935	Subordinate Union
5	1935–47	Equal Federation (federation idea under GOI Act 1935)

- The richest single trap across the whole topic is mixing up these four labels. Hastings is never a Viceroy. Canning is never a mere "GG of Bengal." Bentinck is the hinge year, 1833.
- Acts did two different jobs. Some created or reshaped the office (1773, 1784, 1833, 1858). Others reshaped who could legislate or vote (1861, 1892, 1909, 1919, 1935). Keep these two families apart in your head.
- The Governor-General of India remained in place after 1858 too — the same man was simply also called Viceroy. The title never disappeared; it merged with "Viceroy."

> Logic: If a question asks for the "first Governor-General," check whether it means of Bengal (Hastings, 1773) or of India (Bentinck, 1833). The first Viceroy was Canning (1858). Ring Fence ≠ Subsidiary Alliance ≠ Doctrine of Lapse.

3.1 Office of Governor-General and Viceroy — quick office map

- The Regulating Act of 1773 created the first Governor-General of Bengal, Warren Hastings, with a four-member Council. The Supreme Court at Calcutta began in 1774.
- Pitt's India Act, 1784 set up a Board of Control for politics and left the Court of Directors with commerce.
- The Charter Act of 1833 created the Governor-General of India. The first holder was William Bentinck. The Company ceased to trade.
- The Government of India Act, 1858 ended Company rule. The GG also became Viceroy. A Secretary of State and a Council of India were created in London. The first Viceroy was Canning.
- The Indian Councils Act, 1861 introduced the portfolio / departmental system.
- The Indian Independence Act, 1947 named the last Viceroy as Mountbatten.
- The last Governor-General of India was C. Rajagopalachari (1948–50).

3.2 Company Governors of Bengal (before 1773)

These names belong mainly to Topic 2's Bengal-conquest story. Here they are tagged only as the office predecessors of the Governor-General.

- Robert Clive governed Bengal in 1758–60 and again in 1765–67. His second term produced the Treaty of Allahabad (इलाहाबाद की संधि) (1765) and the start of Dual Government.
- On the civilian side he banned gifts to officials and private trade by Company servants. On the military side he ended the double batta (extra allowance); from 1766 the allowance was kept only for troops serving outside Bengal and Bihar.
- He is often called the founder of the British Empire in India after Plassey (प्लासी) and Diwani (दीवानी), but he was never Governor-General of Bengal — that title begins with Hastings under the Regulating Act.
- Verelst and Cartier governed Bengal while Dual Government continued, including the Bengal Famine of 1770.
- None of these men held the legal title "Governor-General." That title starts only with the Regulating Act of 1773.

> Logic: Dual Government was enforced by Clive (1765) and abolished by Warren Hastings (1772). Full Plassey–Buxar (बक्सर)–Diwani detail sits in Topic 2.

3.3 Regulating Act, 1773

Identity: First parliamentary statute regulating the East India Company in India | Creates: Governor-General of Bengal

British Parliament's first serious attempt to regulate Company rule, passed after the Company nearly went bankrupt despite ruling rich Bengal.

- It created the post of Governor-General of Bengal with a four-member Executive Council. Warren Hastings was the first holder.
- This is not the Governor-General of India — that all-India title comes only with the Charter Act of 1833.
- Bombay and Madras were made subordinate to Bengal in war, peace and treaties with Indian powers.
- A Supreme Court was set up at Calcutta in 1774. The first Chief Justice was Sir Elijah Impey.
- Clash between the Supreme Court and the Governor-General-in-Council was later eased by the Amending Act / Act of Settlement, 1781.
- The Company's Court of Directors (24 members) had to report revenue, civil and military matters to the British government.
- Company servants were barred from private trade and from taking presents or bribes, though the ban was widely broken in practice.

> Logic: Regulating Act creates the Bengal office. Pitt's India Act (1784) reorganises London control. Do not call Hastings the first GG of India.

3.4 Warren Hastings (1772–1785)

First Governor-General of Bengal (Regulating Act 1773). Governor of Bengal from 1772.

- On the Court of Directors' order he ended Dual Government in 1772. The Company took direct Diwani charge; deputy Diwans Muhammad Reza Khan and Raja (राजा) Shitab Rai (राई) were dismissed.
- He moved the state treasury from Murshidabad to Calcutta.
- He started hierarchical Diwani and Faujdari courts; Cornwallis later made the system more rigid.
- He and Wellesley are linked with the Ring Fence / Security Cell policy — protect Company territory by buffering neighbours (notably Awadh) rather than open annexation everywhere.
- The Asiatic Society of Bengal was founded on 15 January 1784. Sir William Jones was founder-president. Hastings declined the chair.
- Impeachment proceedings ran in Britain from 1788 to 1795 (charges pressed by Edmund Burke); he was acquitted in light of his service.
- His rival in Council was Philip Francis.
- He did not invent the Subsidiary Alliance.
- Established Sadar Diwani Adalat and Sadar Nizamat Adalat (appellate courts) at Calcutta; auctioned the right to collect land revenue to the highest bidder (quinquennial settlement 1772); codified Hindu and Muslim laws, leading to N.B. Halhed's English translation of the Sanskrit code as A Code of Gentoo Laws (1776); wrote the introduction to the first English translation of the Bhagavad Gita by Charles Wilkins (1784).

Wars and clashes under Hastings (Cause → Course → Result)

Rohilla War, 1774

- Cause: The Rohillas of Rohilkhand threatened Awadh; Shuja-ud-Daula (शुजाउद्दौला) asked for Company troops under Hastings's Ring Fence logic.
- Course: Company forces helped Awadh crush the Rohillas; Hafiz Rahmat Khan was killed.
- Result: Rohilkhand came under Awadh's control, but the war later fed Hastings's impeachment charges over cruelty and presents.

First Anglo-Maratha (आंग्ल-मराठा) War (to Salbai, 1782)

- Cause: Succession (उत्तराधिकार क्रम) intrigue at Poona and the Treaty of Surat–Purandhar tangle pulled the Company into Maratha politics.
- Course: Fighting swung between Bombay and Bengal theatres; neither side won a clean knockout.
- Result: The Treaty of Salbai (सालबाई की संधि), 1782 restored a long peace and left the Company stronger in western India without full Maratha annexation.

Banaras / Chait Singh, 1781

- Cause: Hastings pressed the Raja of Banaras, Chait Singh, for extra tribute and troops.
- Course: Revolt flared at Banaras; Hastings fled briefly to Chunar.
- Result: Chait Singh was deposed; Banaras stayed a UP-facing Hastings tag and another impeachment charge.

> Logic: Warren ≠ Lord Hastings (1813–23). Jones founded the Asiatic Society, not Hastings. Ring Fence is Hastings–Wellesley; Subsidiary Alliance as a finished tool is Wellesley.
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Asiatic Society of Bengal (1784): - Founder: Founded on 15 January 1784 at Calcutta by Sir William Jones (Orientalist scholar and Supreme Court judge). - Governor-General: Established during the tenure of Warren Hastings, who actively encouraged the society and patronized Charles Wilkins' English translation of the Bhagavad Gita, but modestly declined the offer of Presidentship in favour of Sir William Jones.
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Warren Hastings & Asiatic Society (UPPCS A/R Spine): - Assertion (A): The Asiatic Society of Bengal was established during Warren Hastings' period and he declined the Presidentship in favour of Sir William Jones. (True) - Reason (R): Hastings was an erudite scholar with deep appreciation for Oriental learning (Persian, Arabic, Sanskrit). (True, but R is not the complete causal explanation of A; Hastings declined out of administrative propriety and recognition of Jones's supreme linguistic authority).

3.5 Pitt's India Act, 1784

Named for British Prime Minister William Pitt the Younger. It fixed the problem the Regulating Act had left open: who really controls Company policy from London.

- It created a Board of Control (commonly remembered as six Crown-appointed commissioners) to oversee the Company's political and military affairs.
- The Court of Directors kept charge of commercial business but had to send its political correspondence through the Board first. This dual setup is often called dual control from London — do not confuse it with Clive's Dual Government in Bengal (1765).
- The Governor-General's Council was reduced from four members to three, giving the Governor-General a stronger relative (सापेक्ष) voice.
- Bombay and Madras were placed fully under the control of the Governor-General and Council in Calcutta.
- Company territories in India were, for the first time, officially termed "British possessions in India."
- The Board's expenses were later charged more clearly to Indian revenues under the quiet renewals that followed.

> Logic: Pitt's Act = Board of Control + Directors. Regulating Act = creates GG of Bengal. Dual control (London) ≠ Dual Government (Bengal).

3.6 Lord Cornwallis (1786–1793; short second term 1805)

Permanent Settlement, 1793 (GG tag only)

- He introduced the Permanent Settlement of 1793 in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa. Land revenue was fixed in perpetuity with the zamindar (ज़मींदार) treated as proprietor.
- The plan was shaped with John Shore's revenue work; Cornwallis enacted it. Zamindars who failed to pay risked losing the estate under the harsh payment rules (often remembered as the sunset rule).
- Cultivators stayed tenants; they did not get ownership under this settlement. The Company gained a stable cash demand.
- Madras was not Permanent Settlement country — Ryotwari (Munro (मुनरो)) and other systems dominate there. Mahalwari (महलवाड़ी) belongs mainly to North India.
- Full compare of Permanent Settlement / Ryotwari / Mahalwari (shares, revision, peasant classes) lives in the British Administration and Economy chapter — keep only the Cornwallis tag here.

Judicial, police and service reforms

- The Cornwallis Code of 1793 collected his judicial reforms and rested on separation of powers: revenue work was split from judicial work.
- In 1787 the District Collector briefly held Diwani-judge powers and some Faujdari powers. In 1790–92 Indian-staffed district Faujdari courts were replaced by four Circuit Courts (three for Bengal, one for Bihar) under European judges, with Indian kazis and muftis assisting.
- Under the Code, the Collector lost judicial and police powers and kept taxation only. District Judges took civil, criminal and police work in a new hierarchy.
- He is credited with founding the covenanted Indian Civil Service (Public Services) on European lines; higher covenanted posts stayed Europeans only.
- In 1793 he separated landlords from police duties, set up thanas roughly every twenty to thirty square miles, and appointed the Daroga under the Magistrate — often remembered as the local face of Company authority ("Aura and Authority of Company Bahadur").
- He returned for a short second term from 30 July to 5 October 1805 and died at Ghazipur (Uttar Pradesh (उत्तर प्रदेश)); his tomb is still there.

Third Anglo-Mysore War (Cause → Course → Result)

- Cause: Tipu attacked Travancore, a Company ally; Cornwallis formed a triple front with the Nizam (निजाम) and the Marathas.
- Course: Allied armies pushed Tipu back; Seringapatam came under pressure.
- Result: The Treaty of Seringapatam, 1792 forced Tipu to cede about half his territory and pay a heavy indemnity. Cornwallis personally led this war.

> Logic: Permanent Settlement = Cornwallis (not Bentinck). Ryotwari = Munro. Sati abolition = Bentinck, 1829. Tomb at Ghazipur is a UP-facing fact.

3.7 Charter Act, 1793

Identity: Quiet 20-year renewal between Pitt's dual control (1784) and the trade break of 1813

- This Act renewed the Company's charter for another 20 years. The Company's trade monopoly continued.
- It made almost no structural (संरचनात्मक) change to the Indian office, so it is easy to under-read — but Match List stems still use it as a chronology anchor.
- The Board of Control's expenses were charged to Indian revenue.
- The Governor-General's power to override his Council in special cases was strengthened.
- The Commander-in-Chief was not automatically a Council member unless specially appointed.
- Cornwallis's separation of revenue from judicial work (the Cornwallis Code) continued alongside this renewal.

> Logic: 1793 = quiet renewal + monopoly continues. 1813 cuts the India trade monopoly. 1833 ends all Company trade and creates GG of India.

3.8 Sir John Shore (1793–1798)

- Shore continued Cornwallis's policy of non-intervention: avoid new wars with Indian states whenever possible.
- He is remembered for the Vizier Ali affair at Banaras (1797–98), a succession dispute in Awadh that flared up near the end of his term.
- He extended the Permanent Settlement (स्थायी बंदोबस्त) principle further and kept the civil service reforms of Cornwallis running.
- His caution frustrated the Company's directors, who wanted a more forward policy (फॉरवर्ड). Wellesley replaced him in 1798.

> Logic: Shore is the calm before Wellesley. Between Cornwallis and Wellesley, Shore followed a policy of non-intervention, not Cornwallis himself.

3.9 Lord Wellesley (वेलेज़ली) (1798–1805)

- He gave Subsidiary Alliance its finished shape from 1798. He did not invent the idea: Dupleix (डुप्ले) had first lent European troops to an Indian ruler for fixed payment, and the Company used an early form with Awadh in 1765.
- The first state to accept Wellesley's evolved version was the Nizam of Hyderabad (1798; renewed 1800). Sequence after that: Mysore (1799), Tanjore (तंजावुर) (1799), Awadh (1801), Peshwa (पेशवा) (Dec 1802), Bhonsle of Berar (1803), Sindhia (1804), then Rajput (राजपूत) states such as Jodhpur, Jaipur, Machheri, Bundi and Bharatpur; Holkar came later (1818).

- The ruler kept internal administration but lost control of war, peace and other Europeans. He paid a subsidy, accepted a British Resident, and could not employ non-British Europeans. The aim was British paramountcy and a standing army (सेना) at the ally's cost — not a fixed commercial income for the Company as the main object.
- He arrived when British fear of Napoleon was high; subsidiary alliances helped keep Indian states from French contact and keep the British flag firm in India.
- Wellesley was recalled in 1805 because the wars cost too much.

Wars under Wellesley (Cause → Course → Result)

Fourth Anglo-Mysore War, 1799

- Cause: Tipu's French contacts and refusal of a full subsidiary settlement alarmed Wellesley in the Napoleonic years.
- Course: Company armies stormed Seringapatam; Tipu was killed in 1799.
- Result: Mysore went under Subsidiary Alliance with a restored Wodeyar child ruler; Tipu's sons were detained.

Second Anglo-Maratha War, 1803–05

- Cause: The Treaty of Bassein (बेसिन की संधि) (31 December 1802) pulled Peshwa Bajirao II into subsidiary alliance — the first Maratha chief under Wellesley's finished system — and provoked other Maratha houses.
- Course: About 6,000 British troops restored the Peshwa at Poona against land/revenue worth about ₹26 lakh a year. Arthur Wellesley won at Assaye; campaigns also hit Bhonsle and Sindhia.
- Result: Maratha power was broken in the north and west; British paramountcy advanced, but war costs helped trigger Wellesley's recall.

>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Early 19th-Century Chronological Spine (UPPCS 2024): - 1. Death of Nana Fadnavis: 1800 CE (the "Maratha Machiavelli") - 2. Recall of Lord Wellesley: 1805 CE - 3. Vellore Mutiny: July 1806 CE (under Governor Sir George Barlow) - 4. Anglo-Nepalese War: 1814–1816 CE (under Lord Hastings; concluded by Treaty of Sugauli)

3.10 Barlow and Minto I (1805–1813) — the bridge years

Two lesser-named rulers cover the gap between Wellesley's recall and Lord Hastings' arrival. They are worth only a short bridge card.

- George Barlow served as acting Governor-General for a short spell in 1805 after Cornwallis died in office. He kept to non-intervention and cut costs after Wellesley's expensive wars. The Vellore Mutiny (1806) broke out in this bridge period (often tagged to Barlow's Madras/Company regime).
- Lord Minto I (1807–1813) dealt with the fallout of the Vellore Mutiny (1806) and signed the Treaty of Amritsar (अमृतसर) (1809) with Ranjit Singh (रणजीत सिंह), fixing the Sutlej (सतलुज) as the Sikh empire's southern limit.

- The Charter Act of 1813 was passed as his term was ending, right at the hand-over to Lord Hastings.

> Logic: These two names rarely anchor a full question on their own; they matter mainly as chronology filler between Wellesley (recalled 1805) and Lord Hastings (from 1813).

3.11 Lord Hastings, Earl of Moira (1813–1823) — not Warren

- He was the Earl of Moira. He is not Warren Hastings.
- Charles Metcalfe negotiated subordinate alliances of 1817–18 with princely states of Rajputana on Hastings' behalf.
- The Ryotwari settlement was formalised in Madras under Thomas Munro (Governor of Madras 1820–27) during this broader era — full Ryotwari teaching sits in the Administration and Economy chapter.
- The Charter Act of 1813, which ended the Company's India trade monopoly, was enacted right as his term began.

Wars under Lord Hastings (Cause → Course → Result)

Anglo-Nepal War, 1814–16

- Cause: Gorkha expansion into the Terai (तराई) and hill tracts collided with Company frontier claims.
- Course: Early British setbacks gave way to a hard mountain campaign.
- Result: The Treaty of Sugauli (signed 1815, ratified 1816) fixed Nepal's frontiers and brought hill posts such as Kumaon (कुमाऊँ)–Garhwal (गढ़वाल) into the British orbit.

Pindari (पिंडारी) campaign and Third Anglo-Maratha War, 1817–18

- Cause: Pindari raids into Company territory and the last Maratha challenge to paramountcy.
- Course: Hastings ran a coordinated campaign against Pindaris and Maratha houses together.
- Result: The Peshwa title was abolished; Peshwa territories went into the Bombay Presidency; British paramountcy across central India was established.

> Logic: If a question pairs Hastings with Nepal or Sugauli, it is Lord Hastings, not Warren. Third Maratha War ≠ Cornwallis.

3.12 Charter Act, 1813

- The Company's trade monopoly in India was ended. Other British merchants could now trade freely with India, though the Company kept its monopoly over tea and trade with China.
- The Company's political control and territories were renewed for another 20 years.
- For the first time, the state accepted responsibility for Indian education: ₹1 lakh a year was earmarked for this purpose.

- Christian missionaries were allowed to preach and settle in India, a right the Company had earlier restricted.
- Local governments were given some power to tax for local purposes.

> Logic: 1813 kills the India trade monopoly only, keeping tea/China. 1833 finishes the job and ends all Company trade.

3.13 Lord Amherst (1823–1828)

- John Adam briefly acted as Governor-General in 1823 before Amherst arrived. Adam is remembered mainly for tightening press licensing — the restrictions Metcalfe later removed.
- Amherst also oversaw the long Siege of Bharatpur (1825–26), where the British finally broke the fortress that had resisted them since Lord Lake's failed attempt in 1805.

First Anglo-Burmese War (Cause → Course → Result)

- Cause: Burmese expansion under the Konbaung kings into Assam–Manipur frontiers and clashes with Company outposts.
- Course: A costly jungle and river war; Burmese commander Maha Bandula was killed at Danubyu in 1825.
- Result: The Treaty of Yandabo, 1826 gave the Company Assam, Manipur, Arakan and Tenasserim.

> Logic: First Burma War is Amherst's, not Dalhousie's. Basic date fact = Yandabo 1826.

3.14 Lord William Bentinck (1828–1835)

- Sati was abolished in 1829 (Regulation XVII) after the campaign of Raja Rammohan Roy; the rule was extended to Madras and Bombay in 1830.
- He also moved against female infanticide and other social evils.
- Thuggee was suppressed under Captain (later Major) William Sleeman; about 1,562 thugs were arrested between 1826 and 1835, and organised thuggee was largely broken by about 1837.
- On the Court of Directors' wish he preferred non-interference in princely states when possible (for example Jaipur, Jodhpur, Bundi, Kota, Bhopal), but he took over Mysore in 1831, Cachar in 1832, and Coorg (Kurg) in 1834 for extreme mismanagement; Jaintia (जयंतिया) followed in 1835.
- His seven-year rule largely dropped the older war-and-annexation drive in favour of administrative and social reform.
- He was the first to hold the title Governor-General of India under the Charter Act of 1833.
- He accepted Macaulay's Minute (1835). Calcutta Medical College was founded in 1835.
- He also extended the Ryotwari and Mahalwari revenue settlements and eased some restrictions on the press.

- Slave-export from Bengal had been stopped by a 1789 order; later slave laws (1811, 1823) and the 1833 Charter pressed for abolition; Act V of 1843 under Ellenborough made slavery illegal in most of India, and the IPC 1860 treated it as a crime.

> Logic: Bentinck = Sati and the title switch to "Governor-General of India" in 1833. Permanent Settlement is Cornwallis. Slavery abolition as a finished Act = Ellenborough 1843, not Bentinck alone.

3.15 Charter Act, 1833

The single most important Act between 1773 and 1858 for office structure.

- The Governor-General of Bengal became the Governor-General of India. The first holder of this all-India title was William Bentinck.
- The Company stopped trading altogether, even in tea and China trade. It became a purely administrative body, ruling India on behalf of the Crown.
- Legislative power was centralised in the Governor-General-in-Council. Bombay and Madras presidencies lost their own law-making power.
- A new Law Member was added to the Governor-General's Council as a fourth, non-voting member. Lord Macaulay was the first Law Member.
- A Law Commission was set up to codify Indian law, which eventually produced the Indian Penal Code.
- Section 87 of the Act stated that no Indian subject should be barred from any office on grounds of religion, birth or colour, but this promise was not implemented in practice.

> Logic: 1833 = GG of India created + all Company trade ends + Law Member added. Keep these three together as one key fact.

3.16 Lord Macaulay

- He was Law Member of Bentinck's Council, the first person to hold that new post created by the Charter Act of 1833. He was not a Governor-General.
- His Minute on Indian Education (2 February 1835) favoured English as the medium of higher education and the idea of downward filtration.
- He drafted the Indian Penal Code, which was enacted in 1860, under the Law Commission set up by the 1833 Act.
- Wood's Despatch of 1854 (Dalhousie's time) is the later mass-education plan. It is not Macaulay's Minute.

> Logic: Macaulay 1835 ≠ Wood 1854 ≠ Hunter 1882 (Ripon).

> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Chronology of British Education Landmarks: - 1. Wood's Despatch: 1854 CE ("Magna Carta of English Education in India") - 2. Hunter Education Commission: 1882 CE (under Lord Ripon, primary & secondary education) - 3. Sadler Commission: 1917 CE (Calcutta University Commission) - 4. Sargent Plan of Education: 1944 CE

3.17 Lord Metcalfe (1835–1836) — "Liberator of the Press"

- Metcalfe served as acting Governor-General for about a year, between Bentinck's departure and Auckland's arrival.
- He is remembered chiefly for removing the restrictions on the press that Governor-General Adams had imposed in 1823, earning him the title "Liberator of the Indian Press."
- Before this, he had served as Resident at Delhi and as an agent to the Governor-General in Rajputana, dealing directly with Mughal (मुग़ल) court politics.
- His term was too short for major legislative reform; his single durable legacy is press freedom.

> Logic: The Governor-General who freed the press in the 1830s was Metcalfe, not Bentinck.

3.18 Lord Auckland (1836–1842)

- Education policy continued along Macaulay's English-medium line during his tenure, but this is a minor footnote next to the Afghan disaster.
- Auckland was recalled after the Afghan collapse, and Ellenborough replaced him to manage the fallout.

First Anglo-Afghan War, 1839–42 (Cause → Course → Result)

- Cause: Fear of Russian influence on Dost Muhammad pushed Auckland into a forward Afghan adventure.
- Course: The British installed Shah Shuja at Kabul; occupation turned sour; the winter 1841–42 retreat from Kabul destroyed almost the whole column.
- Result: A military and political disaster; Auckland was recalled; later Viceroys treated Afghan occupation with caution until Lytton's Proud Reserve revived a forward line.

> Logic: First Afghan War = Auckland, not Dalhousie or Ellenborough. The disaster, not the annexation, is the key fact.

3.19 Lord Ellenborough (1842–1844)

- Act V of 1843 abolished slavery in British India under him.

- The Afghan line of Masterly Inactivity began in his time and ran through to Northbrook; it is usually credited to John Lawrence (लॉरेंस), who practised it most fully. The phrase is linked to an article by J. W. S. Wiley.
- He is also remembered for the controversial "Gates of Somnath (सोमनाथ)" episode, where he brought back gates from Afghanistan claiming they were the temple's original looted gates — a claim historians dispute.
- His autocratic style and costly gestures irritated the Court of Directors, who recalled him in 1844, one of the few Governors-General removed directly by the Directors rather than by the Crown.

Sindh annexation, 1843 (Cause → Course → Result)

- Cause: Company fear of an open Indus (सिंधु)–Afghan corridor and disputes with the Talpur Amirs of Sindh.
- Course: Field commander Sir Charles Napier defeated the Amirs at Miani and Dabo.
- Result: Sindh was annexed in August 1843 under Ellenborough — not under Dalhousie.

> Logic: Sindh is 1843, under Ellenborough, not Dalhousie. Slavery Act = Ellenborough. Masterly Inactivity ≠ Wellesley or Canning.

3.20 Lord Hardinge I (1844–1848)

- He banned human sacrifice and worked against female infanticide among tribal (आदिवासी) groups such as the Khonds.
- He encouraged English education and gave a hiring preference to English-educated Indians for some government posts.
- He handed over to Dalhousie in 1848, just before the Second Sikh War.

First Anglo-Sikh (आंग्ल-सिख) War, 1845–46 (Cause → Course → Result)

- Cause: After Ranjit Singh's death, Khalsa (खालसा) army politics and British troop moves on the Sutlej frontier hardened into war.
- Course: Hard-fought battles such as Mudki, Ferozeshah, Aliwal and Sobraon decided the campaign.
- Result: The Treaty of Lahore, 1846 cut Sikh power, placed a British Resident at Lahore, and set up the later annexation of Punjab under Dalhousie.

> Logic: Hardinge I = First Sikh War, 1845–46. Do not confuse with Hardinge II (Viceroy 1910–16, Delhi Durbar).

3.21 Lord Dalhousie (1848–1856)

- He used the Doctrine of Lapse. Adopted (अंगीकृत) heirs were not recognised.

- Lapse chronology: Satara (1848) first; Jaitpur and Sambalpur (1849); Baghat (1850); Udaipur (उदयपुर) (1852); Jhansi (झांसी) (1854); Nagpur (1854).
- Awadh in February 1856 was taken for misgovernance, not Lapse. The Nawab was Wajid Ali Shah (वाजिद अली शाह). In 1854 James Outram replaced W. H. Sleeman as Resident; Outram's report that Awadh's administration was corrupt and the people miserable became the annexation brief.
- He also took hill tracts of Sikkim (including Darjeeling-side areas) on a pretext of mistreatment of British subjects.
- His real name was James Andrew Broun-Ramsay (Earl of Dalhousie).
- Wood's Despatch belongs to 1854.
- The first passenger railway ran from Bombay (Boribunder) to Thane in 1853, started by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. Motives were mainly to move raw (रॉ) materials to ports and to move the army quickly against revolt.
- He set up a separate Public Works Department (about 1854) and spent heavily on roads, canals and other works; earlier public works sat under the Military Board.
- The Widow Remarriage Act of 1856 was drafted in his time and passed as Canning took over.
- Later railway expansion peaked around 1900 under Curzon, but the start of passenger rail is Dalhousie.
- Introduced the Non-Regulation system of centralized administrative control in newly acquired territories (Punjab, Lower Burma / Pegu); raised Gurkha regiments.
- Recommended the Thomsonian system of vernacular education for the North-Western Provinces (1853); founded the first Engineering College at Roorkee (Thomason College of Civil Engineering).
- Laid the basis of the modern postal system (Post Office Act, 1854) with uniform half-anna postage stamps; started the electric telegraph service (Calcutta to Agra); worked on the Grand Trunk Road and developed the harbours of Karachi, Bombay, and Calcutta.

Wars and annexations under Dalhousie (Cause → Course → Result)

Second Anglo-Sikh War and Punjab, 1848–49

- Cause: Resentment after Lahore settlement, Multan revolt, and Khalsa army politics broke the fragile peace.
- Course: Battles such as Chillianwala and Gujarat decided the war.
- Result: Punjab was annexed in 1849; the Sikh kingdom ended as an independent power.

Second Anglo-Burmese War, 1852

- Cause: Trade and diplomatic disputes at Rangoon after Yandabo's unsettled aftermath.
- Course: A short coastal campaign took Lower Burma.
- Result: Pegu / Lower Burma was annexed; full Burma annexation waited for Dufferin's Third War in 1885.

> Logic: Dalhousie = Lapse + railways + PWD. Awadh = misrule, not Lapse. He did not accept Lakshmibai (लक्ष्मीबाई)'s adopted son. First Burma = Amherst; Second = Dalhousie; Third = Dufferin.
>

(Regulation XVII of 1829) - Lord Dalhousie: Doctrine of Lapse (1848 onwards) - Lord Curzon: Partition of Bengal (1905)

[!TIP] Exam Anchor — 1857 Leadership & Doctrine of Lapse (UPPCS 2024 Spine): - Statement 1: Babu Kunwar Singh, Zamindar of Jagdishpur (Arrah, Bihar), led the armed rebellion against the British in 1857. (True) - Statement 2: Lord Dalhousie recognised the adopted son of Rani Lakshmibai as heir. (False — Dalhousie rejected adopted son Damodar Rao under the Doctrine of Lapse and annexed Jhansi in 1854).

3.22 Charter Act, 1853

Identity: Last Charter Act | First serious legislative redesign | Opens ICS to competition

- For the first time, the Governor-General's legislative and executive functions were separated. Six new legislative councillors were added, forming a small Indian (Central) Legislative Council distinct from the executive.
- Limited local / Indian representation began in that legislative wing — still nomination-heavy, but a step beyond pure executive law-making.
- The Law Member became a full member of the Governor-General's Executive Council (earlier, under 1833, the post had been weaker in voting (गणपूर्ति) terms).
- Recruitment to the civil services was opened to competitive examination, following the Macaulay Committee. This ended patronage nomination. Papers long remained in London, so Indian entry stayed hard in practice.
- The Court of Directors was reduced from 24 to 18 members, with six nominated directly by the Crown.
- Unlike earlier Charters, this one set no fixed 20-year renewal — Company rule was left deliberately open until 1858.

Logic: 1833 promised equality of office in spirit (Section 87) and created GG of India. 1853 is the Act of open ICS competition and the first proto-legislature. 1858 ends Company rule.

3.23 Lord Canning (1856–1862)

Last GG of Company + first Viceroy (from 1858).

- He suppressed the 1857 Revolt. He was called "Clemency Canning."
- With the efforts of Ishwar Chandra Vidyasagar (विद्यासागर), the Hindu Widow Remarriage Act, 1856 was passed; Section XV legalised widow remarriage and the children of such marriages. Later propagators included Dhondo Keshav Karve (widow ashram at Poona, 1899) and Vishnu Shastri.
- The Government of India Act 1858 ended Company rule. The Queen's Proclamation was read by Canning at an Allahabad Durbar on 1 November 1858. It put India under the Crown, abandoned annexation by conquest/Lapse as policy, and restored the right of princes to adopt heirs.

- The Indian Councils Act 1861 introduced the portfolio / departmental system.
- The universities of Calcutta, Bombay and Madras were founded in 1857.
- European troops staged the White Mutiny in 1859.
- The Indian Penal Code, drafted under the 1833 Act's Law Commission, was finally enacted in 1860 (and treated slavery as a crime).
- Alexander (सिकंदर) Cunningham was appointed Archaeological Surveyor in 1861 in this era (ASI later expanded; Curzon centralised it).

> Logic: First Viceroy = Canning, not Hastings or Bentinck. Widow Remarriage Act year = 1856 under Canning (drafted across the Dalhousie–Canning hand-over). Victoria as Empress / Kaiser-i-Hind = 1877 Durbar (Lytton), not 1858.

3.24 Government of India Act, 1858

Passed directly in response to the 1857 Revolt, this Act is the true hinge of the whole topic.

- Company rule ended. India came under the direct rule of the British Crown.
- The Board of Control and the Court of Directors were both abolished.
- A new Secretary of State for India, a member of the British Cabinet, took charge of Indian affairs, advised by a 15-member Council of India in London.
- The Governor-General also became the Viceroy — the Crown's direct representative in India. The first person to hold both titles together was Canning.
- The Secretary of State was given power to supervise all administration in India through the Viceroy.

Queen's Proclamation, 1 November 1858

- The Proclamation was read by Canning at an Allahabad Durbar on 1 November 1858 — the UP-facing transfer-of-power moment.
- It announced that India had passed from the Company to the Crown.
- It promised non-interference in religion, equal treatment of subjects under law, and an end to annexation by conquest or Doctrine of Lapse as standing policy.
- Princes regained the right to adopt heirs. Paramountcy continued, but the open Lapse drive of Dalhousie's years was publicly dropped.
- Do not confuse this with Victoria's title as Empress of India (Kaiser-i-Hind), proclaimed at Lytton's Delhi Durbar of 1877.

> Logic: 1858 changes who is in charge (Crown, not Company). It does not by itself create the portfolio system — that is the 1861 Act, a separate and later reform. Queen's Proclamation place = Allahabad (इलाहाबाद).
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Portfolio System Legalisation (UPPCS 2021 Spine): - Indian Councils Act, 1861: Introduced by Lord Canning; legally substituted the 'portfolio' or departmental system for > collective corporate governance in the Viceroy's Executive Council, laying the institutional foundation of modern cabinet government in India.

3.25 Indian Councils Act, 1861

Identity: Portfolio system Act | First limited Indian nomination to councils | Viceroy: Canning

- Canning had already begun departmental portfolios in practice around 1859. The 1861 Act gave the portfolio / departmental system legal force, so each Executive Council member handled a named department instead of deciding everything corporately.
- It restored legislative powers to Bombay and Madras, which the 1833 centralisation had taken away.
- For the first time a few non-official Indians could be nominated to legislative councils. In 1862 Canning nominated the Raja of Banaras, the Maharaja (महाराज) of Patiala, and Sir Dinkar Rao.
- New legislative councils followed for Bengal (1862), later the North-Western Provinces (1886) and Punjab (1897).
- The Viceroy could issue ordinances in an emergency, valid for up to six months.
- Indians entered law-making only by nomination. There was no election and no responsible government.

What it did not do

- It did not end Company rule — that is GOI Act 1858.
- It did not create communal / separate electorates — that is 1909.
- It did not introduce the indirect-election principle — that is 1892.

> Logic: 1858 = Crown + Viceroy. 1861 = portfolio + nomination. 1892 = budget discussion + indirect election. 1909 = Muslim separate electorates.

3.26 Lord Elgin I (1862–1863)

- Elgin I served barely eighteen months before dying of a heart attack at Dharamshala in November 1863.
- His short tenure saw continued frontier friction, including the Wahabi movement's activity on the North-West Frontier.
- Because his term was so brief, no major legislative reform is attached to his name.

> Logic: Elgin I is remembered mainly for dying in office at Dharamshala, not for any reform. Do not confuse with Elgin II (1894–99, famine and plague years).

3.27 Sir John Lawrence (1864–1869) — Masterly Inactivity

- His guiding frontier policy was "Masterly Inactivity": after the disaster of the First Afghan War, he chose to watch the frontier carefully but avoid costly occupation of Afghan territory.
- The policy line began under Ellenborough and ran to Northbrook, but Lawrence is the name usually attached because he got the fullest chance to practise and refine it. The phrase is linked to J. W. S. Wiley.
- High Courts were established at Calcutta, Bombay and Madras in 1865.
- The Indian Forest Department was set up in 1864 to manage forest resources systematically.
- He also oversaw the Bhutan War (1864–65), settled by the Treaty of Sinchula (1865), under which Britain gained the Duars.

> Logic: Masterly Inactivity = Lawrence. Its opposite, the more forward "Proud Reserve," belongs to Lytton. Do not tag Masterly Inactivity to Wellesley, Canning or Mayo.

3.28 Lord Mayo (1869–1872)

- The first all-India census attempt belongs to 1872 under him; the first regular decennial census ran in 1881 under Ripon.
- He began financial decentralisation (Mayo's Resolution, 1870): provinces gained charge of certain services (education, medical, roads) and could raise local taxes to balance budgets — the first clear split of central and provincial finance.
- He founded Mayo College at Ajmer (अजमेर), meant for the education of Indian princes.
- He was assassinated in 1872 by a convict, Sher Ali Afridi, while inspecting the Cellular Jail area on the Andaman (अंडमान) Islands — the only Viceroy murdered while in office.
- Established the Statistical Survey of India (directed by W.W. Hunter); created the Department of Agriculture and Commerce; introduced State Railways.

> Logic: Mayo = 1872 census start + financial decentralisation + Andaman assassination. Regular census 1881 = Ripon.

3.29 Lord Northbrook (1872–1876)

- He handled the Bengal Famine of 1873–74, whose relief effort was generally praised, unlike the failures under Lytton a few years later.
- He suppressed the Kuka movement in Punjab in 1872.
- He resigned in 1876 after disagreeing with London over a more aggressive forward policy on Afghanistan.
- The state visit of the Prince of Wales to India, though planned in his time, actually took place in late 1875–76, right at the end of his tenure.

> Logic: Northbrook's famine relief is the positive contrast to Lytton's later Great Famine failure. Keep the two apart if a question compares famine handling.

3.30 Lord Lytton (1876–1880)

- The Delhi Durbar of 1 January 1877 proclaimed Victoria as Empress of India (Kaiser-i-Hind) under the Royal Titles Act, 1876.
- He passed the Vernacular Press Act in 1878, also called the Gagging / Silencing Act, to curb criticism in Indian-language papers (S. N. Banerjee (बनर्जी) called it "lightning from the sky").
- He also passed the Arms Act in 1878, making it a crime for most Indians to carry arms without a licence (Europeans largely exempt).
- The Great Famine belongs to 1876–78; the Strachey Commission and later Famine Codes grew from this crisis, and the Famine Commission of 1880 followed — full famine teaching sits in the Administration and Economy chapter.
- Lowered the maximum age limit for the Statutory Civil Service examination from 21 to 19 years (1878–79); pursued free trade, abolishing import duties on 29 British manufactured goods (accelerating drain of wealth during severe famine).

Second Anglo-Afghan War, 1878–80 (Cause → Course → Result)

- Cause: Lytton's forward "Proud Reserve" policy replaced Lawrence's Masterly Inactivity after Russian moves toward Afghanistan.
- Course: British forces invaded; Kabul politics swung violently; the campaign was costly and unpopular at home.
- Result: A new Amir accepted British control of Afghan foreign policy; Lytton's Afghan line became the classic contrast to Lawrence's caution.

> Logic: Press Act and Arms Act = Lytton; Ripon repealed the Press Act. Second Afghan War = Lytton, not First Afghan (Auckland). Ilbert Bill is Ripon, not Lytton.
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — 19th-Century Chronological Spine (UPPCS 2025 Matrix): - 1. Annexation of Awadh: February 1856 CE (by Dalhousie on Outram's report of maladministration) - 2. Indigo Revolt in Bengal: 1859–1860 CE (Digambar & Bishnu Biswas) - 3. Second Anglo-Afghan War: 1878–1880 CE (under Lord Lytton) - 4. Ilbert Bill Controversy: 1883 CE (under Lord Ripon)

3.31 Lord Ripon (1880–1884)

- He is called the Father of Local Self-Government because of the Resolution of 18 May 1882 (municipalities and rural local boards).
- He repealed the Vernacular Press Act, which Lytton had passed in 1878.

- The Ilbert Bill of 1883 (presented by Law Member C. P. Ilbert on 2 February 1883) would have allowed Indian judges to try Europeans in criminal cases. White opposition forced a compromise.
- The Hunter Commission (1882) reviewed education.
- The First Factory Act, 1881 banned employment of children under 7, limited children 7–12 to 9 hours a day with 4 holidays a month, and covered factories of a set size. The Second Factory Act, 1891 (Lansdowne) added weekly holidays and further rules for women and children.
- The first regular all-India census ran in 1881 under him (the 1872 attempt was Mayo's).
- His government implemented the Famine Code, drawn up on the recommendations of the 1880 Famine Commission set up after Lytton's failures.

> Logic: Ilbert Bill and Father of Local Self-Government = Ripon, not Curzon or Lytton. Factory Act 1881 ≠ wage-fixing or trade-union Act.

3.32 Lord Dufferin (1884–1888)

- The Indian National Congress was founded in 1885 (Hume) during his tenure.
- He ridiculed Congress as a "microscopic minority." Do not confuse him with Curzon, Minto or Lansdowne.
- The Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885 gave tenants some legal protection against landlords — a land-revenue aftershock taught fully in the Administration and Economy chapter.

Third Anglo-Burmese War, 1885 (Cause → Course → Result)

- Cause: Trade disputes, French influence fears, and unfinished British control after Lower Burma's annexation.
- Course: A short campaign deposed King Thibaw.
- Result: Upper Burma was annexed and Burma became a province of British India.

> Logic: "Microscopic minority" = Dufferin, not Curzon. Third Burma War completes annexation after Amherst (First) and Dalhousie (Second).
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Viceroy Dufferin's Stance on Congress: - In 1887–1888, Viceroy Lord Dufferin publicly mocked the newly formed Indian National Congress at the St. Andrew's Day dinner in Calcutta, ridiculing it as representing only a "microscopic minority" of the Indian population.

3.33 Lord Lansdowne (1888–1894)

- The Age of Consent Act, 1891 was passed in his time, raising the age of consent for marriage consummation to 12, following Behramji Malabari (मालाबारी)'s campaign.
- The Indian Councils Act, 1892 belongs to his tenure (full card below).
- The Factory Act of 1891 further regulated working hours for women and children.

- The Durand Line, the border between British India and Afghanistan, was demarcated in 1893.

> Logic: Age of Consent Act 1891 and Councils Act 1892 both belong to Lansdowne, not Ripon.
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Age of Consent Act, 1891 (UPPCS 2024 Spine): - Advocate: Spearheaded by Parsi social reformer Behramji M. Malabari; enacted under Viceroy Lord Lansdowne, raising the legal age of consent for girls from 10 to 12 years. - Opposition: Strongly opposed by Bal Gangadhar Tilak and orthodox nationalists, who protested foreign legislative interference in sacred Hindu domestic customs.

3.33A Indian Councils Act, 1892

Identity: Budget-discussion Act | Indirect election without using the word “election” | Viceroy: Lansdowne

- Non-official seats rose in the Central and Provincial Legislative Councils, but an official majority remained at the Centre.
- Councils could discuss the annual budget and ask questions on matters of public interest. They still could not vote the executive out or reject the budget as a whole.
- An element of indirect election entered through nomination on recommendation. The statute carefully avoided the open word “election.”
- Central nominations drew on Provincial Legislative Councils and bodies such as the Bengal Chamber of Commerce.
- Provincial nominations drew on District Boards, Municipalities, Universities, Trade Associations and Zamindars.
- The Act still gave no responsible government and no separate communal electorate (that comes in 1909).

> Logic: 1861 = portfolio + nomination. 1892 = budget talk + indirect election. 1909 = Muslim separate electorates. Do not call 1892 the start of communal electorates.

3.34 Lord Elgin II (1894–1899)

- His tenure was dominated by the famine of 1896–97 and a severe plague outbreak in Bombay the same years.
- Harsh plague-control measures led to unrest; the officer W. C. Rand was assassinated by the Chapekar brothers in 1897 in protest.
- Frontier tribal uprisings, including the Tirah campaign (1897), also marked his term.
- He came just before Curzon, and is easily confused with Elgin I (1862–63), who instead is remembered for dying in office.

> Logic: Neither Elgin ordered the Partition of Bengal or the Ilbert Bill — both belong to later or earlier rulers.

3.35 Lord Curzon (1899–1905)

- Among Viceroys he had one of the longest tenures (1899–1905, about seven years).
- The Partition of Bengal was announced for 16 October 1905. A new province of East Bengal and Assam was created.
- Archaeological work had older roots (Asiatic Society 1784; Alexander Cunningham as Archaeological Surveyor from 1861; Survey made a separate body in 1871). Under Curzon the ASI was integrated and centralised (1901); John Marshall became Director-General (appointed 1901; took charge 1902).
- The Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904 provided for protection of monuments; Curzon allocated about £50,000 for conservation.
- The Indian Universities Act also belongs to 1904, tightening government control over universities.
- The Police Commission sat in 1902 under Sir Andrew Frazer (Fraser); Universities Commission under Sir Thomas Raleigh in 1902 (leading to Indian Universities Act 1904). The NWFP was created in 1901. The Imperial Cadet Corps was approved in 1901.
- Set up Department of Commerce and Industry; passed Indian Coinage and Paper Currency Act (1899) putting India on gold standard; conceived the Victoria Memorial at Calcutta (foundation laid 1906, opened 1921).
- The Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899 (Mackenzie (मैकेंज़ी) Act) reduced elected Indian strength on the Corporation.
- He pushed irrigation and resigned in 1905 after a clash with Kitchener over control of the army.
- The Younghusband mission went to Tibet in 1904.
- Gopal Krishna (कृष्णा) Gokhale (गोखले) compared Curzon's rule to that of Aurangzeb (औरंगजेब). Curzon also spoke of assisting Congress to a "peaceful demise."

> Logic: Partition and Ancient Monuments Act = Curzon. Vernacular Press Act ≠ Curzon (that is Lytton). "Microscopic minority" ≠ Curzon (Dufferin).
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Partition of Bengal & Civil Administration 1905: - Enacted by Lord Curzon on 16 October 1905; reorganized provincial boundaries to create the new Muslim-majority province of 'Eastern Bengal and Assam' (capital at Dacca), while Western Bengal was combined with Bihar and Orissa.

3.36 Lord Minto II (1905–1910)

- He took over after Curzon. John Morley was Secretary of State for India. Their joint package is remembered as the Morley–Minto Reforms, legally the Indian Councils Act, 1909.

- Before the Act, the Simla Deputation (1 October 1906) met Minto and asked for Muslim weightage and separate representation. The All-India Muslim League was founded at Dacca in December 1906.
- Minto is often tagged "Father of the Communal Electorate" because 1909 gave legal force to Muslim separate electorates.
- Rajendra Prasad later called Minto the Father of Pakistan, because communal electorates sowed the long partition logic.
- Gandhi (गांधी)'s harsh line on the package is remembered as saying the Morley–Minto Reforms destroyed us / destroyed everything — a teaching tag for how nationalists read the Act.
- S. P. Sinha became the first Indian member of the Viceroy's Executive Council (Law Member) under these reforms.
- The Act enlarged councils and let members discuss the budget and ask questions, but it did not create responsible government or dyarchy.

> Logic: 1909 = separate electorates + Sinha. Chamber of Princes and dyarchy (द्वैध शासन) belong to 1919, not Minto.

3.37 Indian Councils Act, 1909 (Morley–Minto Reforms)

Identity: Indian Councils Act, 1909 | Viceroy: Lord Minto II | Secretary of State: John Morley

Background

- After the Partition of Bengal and the rise of Extremists, the British wanted to associate loyal Indians with councils and to detach Muslim opinion from the Congress stream.
- The Simla Deputation (1906) and the birth of the Muslim League (1906) set the communal bargaining frame that entered the statute in 1909.

Main provisions

- The Imperial (Central) Legislative Council was enlarged (commonly remembered rise from about 16 to about 60 members). An official majority was kept at the Centre.
- Provincial Legislative Councils were also enlarged. In some provinces a non-official majority became possible.
- Members could ask questions and supplementary questions, and move resolutions on the budget. They still could not vote the executive out, and the budget as a whole was not controlled by the council.
- Separate electorates for Muslims (communal representation) were introduced: only Muslim voters elected Muslim candidates in reserved seats. This is the first legal communal electorate.
- Prelims often ask what 1909 provided: answer communal representation / separate electorates — not dyarchy, federation, or provincial autonomy.
- Separate representation was also arranged for bodies such as Presidency Corporations, Chambers of Commerce, Universities and Zamindars.

- Indians entered the Viceroy's Executive Council. The first Indian appointee was Satyendra Prasad Sinha (Law).

What it did not do

- It did not introduce dyarchy.
- It did not create a bicameral centre.
- It did not create the Chamber of Princes.
- It did not promise responsible self-government in the language later used in the Montagu Declaration (मॉण्टेग्यू) (1917).

Political result

- Nationalists treated it as a divide-and-rule device that legalised communal politics.
- Prelims traps almost always turn on 1909 = Muslim separate electorates versus 1919 = dyarchy versus 1932 Communal Award (not the first Muslim separate electorate).

3.38 Lord Hardinge II (1910–1916)

- At the Delhi Durbar of 1911 (December), he hosted George V and Queen Mary. On 12 December 1911 the king announced annulment of the Partition of Bengal and the transfer of the capital from Calcutta to Delhi.
- The capital shift was completed in 1912 under Hardinge II. If a stem forces 1911 vs 1912, prefer 1912 for completed transfer and 1911 for the Durbar announcement.
- Bengal was reconstituted; Bihar and Orissa were separated as a province (from 1 April 1912); Assam returned toward its earlier separate status.
- A bomb was thrown at the Viceroy's procession in Chandni Chowk on 23 December 1912.
- The network is linked to Anushilan (अनुशीलन) Samiti (समिति) and Rash Behari Bose.
- The First World War began during his tenure, in 1914.

> Logic: Do not confuse with Hardinge I (1844–48, First Sikh War). Capital shift and annulment of Partition = Hardinge II, not Curzon.
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Delhi Conspiracy Case (1912): - On 23 December 1912, during the state entry into the new capital of Delhi, a bomb was thrown at Viceroy Lord Hardinge II at Chandni Chowk; planned and executed by revolutionaries of the Anushilan Samiti led by Rash Behari Bose and Sachindra Nath Sanyal.

3.39 Lord Chelmsford (1916–1921)

- His tenure covers World War I's endgame in India and the first mass nationalist shock after Rowlatt–Jallianwala.
- The Montagu Declaration of 20 August 1917 (Secretary of State Edwin Montagu) announced the goal of the gradual development of self-governing institutions and responsible government in India. That declaration is the political preface to the GOI Act, 1919.
- The Government of India Act, 1919 (Montagu–Chelmsford / "Montford" reforms) introduced provincial dyarchy, a bicameral centre, and the Chamber of Princes.
- The Rowlatt Act (1919) and Jallianwala Bagh (13 April 1919) fall in the same years as the reform package and poisoned Indian trust in British "self-government" promises.
- Tagore returned his knighthood. C. Sankaran Nair (शंकरन नायर) resigned from the Viceroy's Executive Council over the Punjab wrongs.
- The Chamber of Princes (~120 members) was provided by the 1919 Act and formally inaugurated in 1921.

> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Chamber of Princes (Narendra Mandal): - Established under the Government of India Act, 1919 based on the Montagu-Chelmsford Report; formally inaugurated by the Duke of Connaught at the Red Fort, Delhi on 8 February 1921, comprising 120 princely members.
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Executive Council Resignation over Jallianwala Bagh (1919): - Sir Chettur Sankaran Nair resigned from his coveted post as Education Member in the Viceroy's Executive Council in July 1919 in protest against the barbaric atrocities of the Jallianwala Bagh massacre and the subsequent atrocities of martial law in Punjab.
>
> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Renunciation of Knighthood over Jallianwala Bagh (1919): - Rabindranath Tagore renounced his British Knighthood in May 1919, writing to Viceroy Lord Chelmsford that "the time has come when badges of honour make our shame glaring in the incongruous context of humiliation".

3.40 Government of India Act, 1919 (Montagu–Chelmsford Reforms)

Identity: GOI Act, 1919 / Montford Reforms | Viceroy: Lord Chelmsford | Secretary of State: Edwin Montagu | In force from: 1921

Background

- Based on the Montagu Declaration (20 August 1917): gradual introduction of responsible government in India.
- Came after wartime recruitment and the Home Rule (होम रूल) agitation, and in the same political climate as Rowlatt (रॉलेट) and Jallianwala — so Indians judged the Act against those wrongs.

Structure of government

- Subjects were classified into Central and Provincial (Devolution Rules).
- Dyarchy in the provinces (dual rule):
- Reserved subjects — police, justice, land revenue, irrigation, and similar "hard" subjects — stayed with the Governor and his Executive Councillors, not responsible to the legislature.
- Transferred subjects — education, health, local self-government, agriculture, and similar "soft" subjects — went to Indian ministers responsible to the Legislative Council.
- At the Centre there was still no dyarchy. The Viceroy's Executive Council remained the real executive. The Act did provide for more Indian members on that Council (commonly remembered as up to three, besides the Commander-in-Chief).

Legislature

- The old Indian Legislative Council was replaced by a bicameral central legislature:
- Council of State (Upper House)
- Legislative Assembly (Lower House)
- A majority of members were chosen by direct election, but the franchise stayed narrow.
- Provincial legislatures were enlarged, with elected majorities for the first time in that form.
- Provincial budgets were separated from the central budget.

Communal and princely features

- Separate electorates were extended beyond Muslims to Sikhs, Indian Christians, Anglo-Indians and Europeans.
- The Act provided for a Chamber of Princes (Narendra Mandal) — about 120 members — inaugurated in 1921.

Other high-yield provisions

- Created the office of High Commissioner for India in London.
- Provided for a Public Service Commission → the Central PSC was set up in 1926.
- Ordered a statutory commission after ten years → this became the Simon Commission (साइमन कमीशन) (1927).
- Local self-government became a real transferred subject under Indian ministers — the institutional payoff of Ripon's earlier local-self-government seed.

Limits and later link

- Dyarchy was half-responsible government: ministers controlled only transferred subjects; Governors kept reserved subjects and special powers.
- Congress largely criticised the Act as inadequate; Liberals and some others worked the councils.
- 1935 later ended provincial dyarchy and introduced provincial autonomy. Centre dyarchy under 1935 never operated. Until federation could start, large parts of central practice still rested on the 1919 frame.

> Logic: 1919 = provincial dyarchy + bicameral centre + Chamber of Princes + Simon clause. 1909 = Muslim separate electorates only as the headline reform. Do not swap.

3.41 Lord Reading (1921–1926)

- Rufus Isaacs, Lord Reading, was the only Jewish Viceroy of India.
- The Non-Cooperation (असहयोग) Movement ended after the Chauri Chaura incident (February 1922); Gandhi was arrested in March 1922.
- The Moplah Rebellion in Kerala broke out in 1921, early in his term.
- The Swaraj Party was formed in 1923 by C. R. Das and Motilal Nehru (नेहरू) after the suspension of Non-Cooperation.
- The Kakori Conspiracy Case (1925) against revolutionary (क्रांतिकारी) nationalists was tried during his tenure.

> Logic: Reading covers the retreat from Non-Cooperation and the rise of the Swaraj Party. Do not confuse with Irwin's later Civil Disobedience (सविनय अवज्ञा) years.

3.42 Lord Irwin (1926–1931)

- The Simon Commission (साइमन कमीशन) was the statutory review ordered by the 1919 Act after ten years. It was appointed in 1927 and arrived in India in 1928.
- All seven members were British; no Indian sat on it. The boycott (बहिष्कार) cry was "Simon Go Back."
- Lala Lajpat Rai (लाला लाजपत राय) was injured in the Lahore lathi-charge during the protest (1928) and later died — a major flashpoint of the boycott years.
- The Simon Report (1930) urged an end to provincial dyarchy, more responsibility for provinces, movement toward a federation, and continuation of communal electorates. Boycott and deadlock pushed politics into the Round Table Conferences and then GOI Act 1935.
- The Nehru Report (नेहरू रिपोर्ट) (1928) and the Lahore Session (पंगु सत्र) of Congress (December 1929), which declared Purna Swaraj (पूर्ण स्वराज), both fall in Irwin's term.
- The Dandi March / Salt (लवणाध्यक्ष) Satyagraha (सत्याग्रह) began in 1930.
- The First Round Table Conference (1930–31) was held in London without Congress participation.
- The Gandhi–Irwin Pact (गांधी-इरविन) was signed in March 1931, ending Civil Disobedience for the time being and securing the release of political prisoners.

> Logic: Irwin = Simon boycott + Dandi + Gandhi–Irwin Pact. Simon is the child of the 1919 ten-year clause, not a sudden 1927 invention.

3.43 Lord Willingdon (1931–1936)

- The Second Round Table Conference (1931) was held with Gandhi attending in person.
- The Communal Award (1932), announced by British PM MacDonald, proposed separate electorates for the "depressed classes" among others.
- The Poona Pact (September 1932) between Gandhi and Ambedkar (अम्बेडकर) replaced this separate electorate with joint electorates and reserved seats for depressed classes.
- The Third Round Table Conference (1932) followed, and its recommendations fed into the Government of India Act, 1935.
- Civil Disobedience was formally called off in 1934.

> Logic: The Communal Award and the Poona Pact both sit inside Willingdon's term, directly setting up the 1935 Act.

3.44 Government of India Act, 1935

Identity: Longest British Indian constitutional statute | Template for much of Independent India's structure | Provincial parts in force from 1937

Background

- Grew out of the Simon Report (1930), the three Round Table Conferences, and the White Paper process after Civil Disobedience.
- It is the last major constitutional Act before Independence and the one whose provincial machinery Congress actually worked in 1937.

Federal design (mostly on paper)

- It proposed an All-India Federation of British Indian provinces plus princely states.
- Accession of states was voluntary. Because enough princes did not join, the federation never started.
- At the Centre the Act wrote a form of dyarchy: defence, external affairs and related reserved subjects stayed with the Governor-General; other federal subjects were to go to ministers. This centre dyarchy never operated.
- Until federation could begin, much of the Centre still ran on the older 1919 executive and legislative frame.

Provincial autonomy (what actually worked)

- Dyarchy in the provinces was abolished. From 1937, provinces got provincial autonomy: ministers responsible to elected legislatures for provincial subjects.
- Powers were divided into three lists: Federal, Provincial and Concurrent (commonly remembered about 59 / 54 / 36).
- Residuary (अवशिष्ट) powers under the Act stayed with the Governor-General / Viceroy.

- Bicameral legislatures were provided in six provinces: Bengal, Bombay, Madras, Bihar, Assam and the United Provinces.
- Governors kept special responsibilities and discretionary / ordinance powers (including the Instrument of Instructions style control). So autonomy was real but not absolute (निरपेक्ष).

Courts, money, services, territory

- A Federal Court was set up in 1937 — the forerunner path to the Supreme Court.
- The Act provided for a reserve bank to control currency and credit. The bank itself rests on the RBI Act, 1934, with operations from 1 April 1935.
- It provided for Federal / Provincial / Joint Public Service Commissions.
- It abolished the Council of India in London and left the Secretary of State with advisers.
- It separated Burma (1937) and Aden from India.
- Franchise widened further but stayed limited. Communal representation continued and was extended after Poona Pact politics.

Political result

- In the 1937 elections Congress formed ministries in a majority of provinces (commonly remembered as about seven of eleven).
- Nehru mocked the Act as a car with brakes but no engine and as a Charter of Slavery (Lucknow (लखनऊ) Congress 1936 rejected the Act).
- The Act's Instrument of Instructions style guidance later fed the vocabulary of the Constitution's Directive Principles (राज्य के नीति निदेशक तत्व) of State Policy.
- Lionel Curtis is often tagged father of dyarchy for the 1919 scheme (dyarchy moved to the Centre on paper in 1935, never worked).
- The League's "Day of Deliverance" (December 1939) celebrated Congress ministries' resignation after the war declaration — a later Linlithgow-era fact that sits on this Act's provincial stage.
- Independent India's Constitution borrowed heavily from this Act's lists, federal court idea, and provincial structure.

> Logic: 1919 = provincial dyarchy. 1935 = provincial autonomy (worked) + federation / centre dyarchy (paper only). Do not say the 1935 federation "started."

3.45 Lord Linlithgow (1936–1943)

Identity: Longest-serving Viceroy of the late British period | War Viceroy | August Offer / Cripps / Quit India years

Provincial autonomy years

- He oversaw the first working of provincial autonomy under the GOI Act, 1935.
- After the 1937 elections, Congress ministries took office in a majority of provinces.

- When Britain declared war on Germany in September 1939, Linlithgow announced India's involvement without consulting Indian leaders. Congress ministries resigned in October–November 1939.
- The Muslim League marked 22 December 1939 as Day of Deliverance.

1940 bridge

- The Ramgarh Congress session (March 1940) sits just before the August Offer in the standard arrange ladder.
- The August Offer (8 August 1940) promised dominion status (डोमिनियन) after the war, expansion of the Viceroy's Executive Council, and a post-war body to frame India's constitution — but it kept a minority / League veto flavour that Congress rejected.
- Individual Satyagraha began in October 1940. The first satyagrahi was Vinoba Bhave; Nehru followed. It was a limited, selected protest, not a mass CDM-style campaign.
- The League's Lahore Resolution (March 1940) demanding Muslim-majority "independent states" also falls in this Viceroyalty.

1942 crisis

- The Cripps Mission (March 1942) offered dominion status after the war, a Constituent Assembly (संविधान सभा), and a provincial opt-out clause. Congress and the League both rejected it. Gandhi's side branded it a post-dated cheque.
- Quit India (भारत छोड़ो) was launched on 8 August 1942 at Bombay with Gandhi's call of Do or Die (करो या मरो). The British arrested the top leadership at once; the movement went underground and faced harsh repression.
- Subhas Chandra Bose (सुभाष चंद्र बोस) had already formed the Forward Bloc (फॉरवर्ड ब्लॉक) (1939); the INA (आज़ाद हिंद फौज) story abroad runs alongside Linlithgow's last years and into Wavell's.

Other tags

- The Bengal Famine of 1943 began toward the end of his tenure and continued into Wavell's arrival.
- He is the usual answer for the longest-serving late-phase Viceroy.

> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Chronology of War & Nationalist Politics (1939–1942): - 1. Resignation of Congress Ministries: October–November 1939 (protest over India being dragged into WWII without consent) - 2. Ramgarh Congress Session: March 1940 (presided by Maulana Abul Kalam Azad) - 3. Linlithgow's August Offer: 8 August 1940 - 4. Cripps Mission arrival: March 1942
>
> Logic: August Offer = Linlithgow, 1940. Cripps / Quit India = 1942. Do not give Wavell the August Offer.

3.46 Lord Wavell (1943–1947)

Identity: Endgame Viceroy before Mountbatten | Wavell Plan / Simla | Cabinet Mission / Interim Government years

Famine and war end

- He took charge in October 1943 while the Bengal Famine was still killing on a mass scale and tried to improve food administration.
- World War II ended in 1945. Political prisoners from Quit India began to be released as talks restarted.

Wavell Plan and Simla Conference, 1945

- The Wavell Plan (June 1945) proposed an interim Executive Council with equal Hindu and Muslim representation (apart from the Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief) and invited Indian leaders to form it.
- The Simla Conference (June–July 1945) tried to implement that plan. It failed mainly because the League insisted it alone spoke for all Muslims, while Congress claimed to speak for all Indians including Muslims.
- Do not confuse Simla 1945 with the later Cabinet Mission of 1946.

Pressure from armed forces and missions, 1945–46

- The INA Trials at the Red Fort (लाल किला) (1945–46) created huge public sympathy for the accused officers.
- The RIN Mutiny (February 1946) of naval ratings at Bombay (and other centres) added military pressure on British authority.
- The Cabinet Mission (1946) still arrived while Wavell was Viceroy. Its plan of 16 May 1946 proposed a united India with a weak centre and provincial grouping. Congress and League accepted and rejected different parts over time.
- Direct Action Day (16 August 1946) followed League politics around the Cabinet Mission deadlock and produced communal massacres, especially in Calcutta.
- The Interim Government was formed on 2 September 1946 under Nehru. The League later joined and then obstructed from inside.

Exit

- By early 1947 London decided on a fixed withdrawal. Mountbatten replaced Wavell in March 1947.

> [!TIP] Exam Anchor — Chronology of Constitutional Negotiations (1942–1946): - 1. Cripps Mission: March 1942 - 2. Wavell Plan: June 1945 (broadcast on 14 June) - 3. Shimla Conference: 25 June – 14 July 1945 - 4. Cabinet Mission: March 1946 (arrived 24 March)
>
> Logic: Wavell Plan ≠ Mountbatten Plan (माउंटबेटन योजना). Simla 1945 ≠ Cabinet Mission 1946. Full mission stories sit in Topic 14; this card is the Viceroy tag + order.

3.47 Lord Mountbatten (March–August 1947) and the transfer of power

Identity: Last Viceroy of British India | Mountbatten Plan | Partition and Independence

Appointment and brief

- He became Viceroy in March 1947, after Attlee's statement (20 February 1947) fixed British withdrawal by June 1948 and named him.
- Communal violence and Congress–League deadlock made an early, clear transfer seem necessary. Mountbatten advanced the timetable.

Mountbatten Plan (3 June 1947)

- Also called the 3 June Plan. Congress and the League accepted its broad outline.
- British India would be partitioned into two Dominions: India and Pakistan.
- Provinces / areas would choose through assemblies or referendum-style procedures (Punjab and Bengal to be partitioned if they opted that way; NWFP referendum; Sylhet referendum).
- Princely states would become free of paramountcy and could accede to either Dominion (or, in theory, stand aside — later integration is a post-Independence story).
- A boundary commission would draw the lines — later associated with Sir Cyril Radcliffe.

Indian Independence Act, 1947

- Passed by the British Parliament and received assent on 18 July 1947.
- It gave legal force to the two Dominions, ended British paramountcy over the states, and set 15 August 1947 as the transfer date.
- Keep three 1947 dates apart: Plan 3 June, Act 18 July, Independence 15 August.

After 15 August

- Mountbatten stayed on as the first Governor-General of the Dominion of India until June 1948.
- C. Rajagopalachari then became the last Governor-General of India (to 26 January 1950, when India became a Republic).
- Pakistan's first Governor-General was Jinnah.

> Logic: Last Viceroy = Mountbatten. Last Governor-General of India = Rajagopalachari. Do not call Mountbatten the last GG of India.
